introduction

Much of the information presented in this booklet has come to me through my own experience as an aromatherapist, as a user of essential oils in everyday life and through the work of many wonderful colleagues that specialise in vibrational therapies who have shared their experiences through the books that they have written.

A list of these books can be found in the Recommended reading section of this booklet.

I believe when aromatherapy is used with the chakras, they become one of the most dynamic tools for personal and spiritual growth.

vibrational energy

In understanding chakras it is important to be familiar with the basic concepts of vibrational energy or subtle energies.

We are all made up of vibrations. The human body is made up of millions of molecules that vibrate giving frequencies that form a unique vibration when we are healthy. The vibrations of the body can easily go out of tune when we experience physical or emotional stress. Vibrational therapies can be used to restore the body's own healthy harmonic resonance.

There are many vibrational therapies and many theories which explain subtle energy. Much of our knowledge of subtle energy comes from the eastern traditional healing arts such as ayurveda, yoga, chakras and traditional Chinese medicine.

Some of the other therapies sharing this subtle approach include flower remedies, gem elixirs, homoeopathy, acupuncture, crystal therapy, colour therapy, chakra balancing, therapeutic touch, spiritual healing and of course, subtle aromatherapy.

This booklet provides us with a framework for understanding this subtle energy by balancing chakras by using essential oils.

Vibrational healing suggests that disturbed or blocked vibrations arise in the subtle body before disease manifests on a physical plane. Therefore it is better to gently restore these vibrations before a physical disease occurs. Often, even when physical disease has developed, it may be possible to be reversed by changing the subtle energy.

When there is a disturbance or blockage of vibrational energy, the vibrational energies emanating from colour, crystals, essential oils or sound can be used to release the blockage, allowing the subtle energy to once again flow freely.

subtle aromatherapy

Subtle aromatherapy makes use of essential oils to affect our psyche, our subtle energies and our spiritual wellbeing. In doing so we are drawing on the subtle, energetic or vibrational qualities of the essential oils, rather than their physical or chemical properties.

Essential oils have the ability to influence our wellbeing at a physical, emotional, mental and subtle level.

Essential oils are versatile and it is possible to use them in so many ways. The more conventional ways of using essential oils include massage, vaporisers, diffusers and burners or baths.

When using essential oils or Perfect Potion's chakra blends for their subtle effects, there is no "right" or "wrong" ways of using them. You do not need to be tied to any conventional method of application. What matters most is your intent. Patricia Davis, author of Subtle Aromatherapy, says that it is important to begin with a clear idea of what you aim to achieve and how you want the oil to help you.

Throughout our body we have main energy centres, which are connected to major organs and glands that govern other body parts.

Each of these main energy centres are referred to as chakra. Chakra is a Sanskrit word which means wheel. A chakra can be visualised as a wheel-like spinning vortex that whirls in a circular motion. They are considered the centre of our subtle energy or life force or prana, also known as Qi in Chinese medicine.

The function of the chakras is to spin and draw in this universal life force energy to keep the spiritual, mental, emotional and physical health of the body in balance.

Chakras appear to be involved in the flow of higher energies via specific subtle energetic channels to the cellular structure of the physical body. The flow of this energy through our chakra system is influenced by our personality and our emotions, as well as our state of spiritual development.

Chakras are transfer points for our thoughts and feelings and the physical functioning of specific endocrine glands.

Anatomically each chakra is associated with a major nerve plexus and a minor endocrine gland. The seven major chakras are located in a vertical line ascending from the base of the spine to the head.

Carolyn Myss, author of Anatomy of the Spirit says that each of these energy centres contains a universal spiritual

CHAKRA	COLOUR	GLAND
Crown	Violet	Pineal
Brow	Indigo	Pituitary
Throat	Blue	Thyroid
Heart	Green	Thymus
Solar Plexus	Yellow	Pancreas
Spleen	Orange	Gonad
Root	Red	Adrenal

life lesson that we must learn as we evolve into higher consciousness.

The base or first chakra – Muladhara: lessons related to the material world.

The sacral or second chakra – Svadhithana: lessons related to sexuality, work and physical desire.

The solar plexus or third chakra – Manipura: lessons related to ego, personality and self esteem.

The heart or fourth chakra – Anahata: lessons related to love, forgiveness and compassion.

The throat or fifth chakra – Vishuddha: lessons related to will and self-expression.

The third eye or sixth chakra – Ajna: lesson related to mind, intuition, insight and wisdom.

The crown or seventh chakra – Sahasrara: lesson related to spirituality.

The chakras can be seen as an archetypal depiction of individual maturation through seven distinct stages. At each stage we gain a more understanding of our personal and spiritual power, since each chakra represents a spiritual life lesson or challenge common to all human beings.

As a person masters each chakra, they gain power and self-knowledge that becomes integrated into their spirit, advancing them along the path of spiritual consciousness.

how to become more aware of the state of your chakras

First and foremost, focus your attention on learning to interpret your life's challenges symbolically - find meaning in them.

Think and feel how they connect to your health. Bring attention everyday to the challenges you face and to how your mind and spirit respond to them. Observe what causes you to lose power, and where you feel the loss. Evaluate the spiritual and biological activity that occurs as a consequence.

Secondly, think of your self at all times as an energy being as well as a physical one. The energy part of your self is the transmitter and recorder of all your thoughts and interactions.

Develop the habit of evaluating the people, experiences and information you allow into your life. Consciously and regularly evaluate your interactions and their influence on your emotional and physical power.

Reflect on the questions in the section Questions for self examination. These questions will assist you in understanding the condition of each chakra.

Each chakra is associated with particular functions within the body and with specific life issues and the way we handle them, both inside ourselves and in our interactions with the world.

Chakras can be thought of as sites where we receive, absorb, and distribute life energies. Through external situations and internal habits, such as long-held physical tension and limiting self-concepts, a chakra can become either deficient or excessive and therefore imbalanced.

These imbalances may develop temporarily with situational challenges, or they may be chronic. A chronic imbalance can come from childhood experiences, past pain or stress, and internalized cultural values.

A deficient chakra neither receives appropriate energy nor easily manifests that chakra's energy in the world. There is a sense of being physically and emotionally closed down in the area of a deficient chakra. Think of the slumped shoulders of someone who is depressed and lonely, their heart chakra receding into their chest. The deficient chakra needs to open.

When a chakra is excessive, it is too overloaded to operate in a healthy way and becomes a dominating force in a person's life. Someone with an excessive throat chakra, for example, might talk too much and be unable to listen well. If the chakra were deficient, he or she might experience restraint and difficulty when communicating.

The underlying theory of each chakra will now be explained.

the base chakra

The Sanskrit name for the base chakra is Muladhara, meaning 'root' or 'support'. The base chakra is concerned with physical needs and basic human survival.

The base chakra reflects the degree to which we feel connected to the earth or are grounded in our activities.

The amount of energy flow through the base chakra is a reflection of one's ability to link with the earth and to function effectively upon the earth plane from day to day.

On a practical level this refers to the ability to keep one's feet firmly upon the ground. The base chakra provides us with the ability to provide for life's necessities, the ability to stand up for one self and a sense of security.

Mastering the base chakra helps you grasp the importance of a fit, healthy body as you travel upward through higher and higher levels of consciousness.

the sacral chakra

The Sanskrit name for the sacral chakra is Svadhithana, meaning 'sweetness' and its associations are indeed what makes life sweet – pleasure, sexuality, nurture, movement and change.

It represents our creative energy and is associated with the functions of our reproductive organs. The sacral chakra is described as the subtle-energy seat of sexuality. It is associated with the gonads and reproductive organs, in addition to the urinary bladder, large and small intestines, the appendix and the lumbar vertebrae.

From a psycho-energetic standpoint, the sacral chakra is associated with the expression of sensual emotion and sexuality.

The sacral chakra leads us from basic existence to help us embrace what makes life worth living.

the solar plexus chakra

The Sanskrit name for the solar plexus chakra is Manipura, which means 'lustrous gem'.

The solar plexus chakra is about the power of being an individual, to be unique, while celebrating our continuing connection with all humanity.

From an emotional perspective, the solar plexus chakra is linked to the issue of personal power. Personal power can be described as a feeling of control over one's life.

Personal power also relates to how people view themselves in relation to others in their lives. Individuals with a so called 'victim consciousness', who has no sense of control over their lives will often manifest an imbalance in the solar plexus chakra. Domination, anger and abuse of others can also be associated with abnormal function of the solar plexus chakra.

The solar plexus chakra relates to trust, fear and intimidation, self esteem, self confidence and self respect, care of oneself and others, responsibility for making decisions, sensitivity to criticism and personal honour.

By strengthening and stimulating the solar plexus chakra you will attain a state in which you can shake off the fears of rejection, criticism, and standing apart from the group and create your own, unique identity.

the heart chakra

The Sanskrit, Anahata means 'sound made by two things striking' or 'unstuck', describing the co-existence of body and spirit.

The heart chakra is concerned with forgiveness and compassion – unconditional love through which we accept another for doing their best. We thus begin to develop true self acceptance.

The heart chakra is integral to an individual's ability to express love. The type of love that may manifest as brotherly love towards neighbours and friends, as emotional love in a love relationship between lovers and also as spiritual love. The highest form of spiritual love is unconditional love towards others.

The throat chakra is the first of the higher centres – associated with communication, self expression, and creativity through sound. The Sanskrit name for the throat chakra is Vishuddha, means 'purification'. Developing the throat chakra means choosing words that bring value to communication.

At a physical/emotional level, dysfunctions of the throat chakra may reflect difficulties in communication.

The throat chakra is the centre of higher creativity such as the creation of word and song. Speech and sound are means by which we can communicate with one another and verbally express new ideas.

Mastering the throat chakra helps us grasp the importance of purifying ourselves by honestly recognising how we feel, following one's dream, using personal power to create and having the confidence to communicate our emotions to others.

the third eye chakra

The third eye chakra is also known as the 'brow chakra'.

The third eye chakra, known as Ajna in Sanskrit means 'to perceive' or 'to know'. Our physical eyes are the tools with which we perceive tangibles, while the 'third eye', above and between the eyebrows – offers us the ability to see and understand all things. It is the connection with the higher functions of consciousness. The third eye chakra is a psychic tool reminding us that everything we see, smell, touch, or taste started as an inner vision or 'in-sight'.

The third eye chakra is one of the psychic centres that gradually develops with meditation. An individual who has a highly developed brow chakra has the ability to 'see within', an aspect of consciousness also related to introspection.

Mastering the third eye chakra will help you to keep your mind focused on related issues, including the awareness of the benefits to be gained from transcending the purely physical world and opening yourself up to intuitive sight and wisdom; the ability to learn from experience and emotional intelligence.

the crown chakra

The crown chakra is considered one of the highest vibrational centres in the subtle body and it is associated with deep inner searching: the so-called spiritual quest. This chakra is most active when individuals are involved in religious and spiritual quest for the meaning of life and in the inner search of their origins as conscious evolving beings.

For the crown chakra to be fully awakened a balance of the body, mind and spirit must occur. When we awaken the crown chakra we open to the possibilities of infinity of space and time and have divine wisdom and understanding of humanity, selflessness, spirituality and devotion.

All the chakras are interrelated, once a lower chakra is in balance it creates an opportunity to open the next chakra. It is generally considered to be best to open the chakras from the lower chakras up. So you make sure that first the Root chakra is open and then you proceed to the sacral chakra, solar plexus, heart, throat, third eye and finally the crown chakra.

The root chakra is the foundation. When the root chakra is open, you are able to feel secure and welcome. Having opened this chakra, you will feel you will have territory.

Only when you feel secure and welcome, are you able to express feelings and sexuality appropriately, the domain of the sacral chakra. This is generally contact with one person at a time. Feelings get you an idea of what you want and when you are aware of that, you can open the solar plexus chakra, to assert your wants, to decide upon them. This assertion is something that is done between people, in groups and in social situations.

Being able to deal with social situations, you can form affectionate relationships, which is the domain of the heart chakra. This tames the aggression of the solar plexus chakra.

When relationships are formed, you are able to express yourself, by the throat chakra. This is also the basis of thinking, which makes insight possible, by opening the third eye chakra.

When all these chakras are open, you are ready for the crown chakra, to develop wisdom, self-awareness and awareness of the whole.

What period of time you spend on each chakra, is something you'll have to find out for yourself. Be aware of how you feel and what you do and don't do. Notice if you really do need to open certain chakras and if you can sustain higher ones.

It will not always be necessary to rigidly follow the order of the chakras, as long as you are aware of what is happening with you.

The test – “Are your chakras healthy?” can help you determine which ones you'll need to open. However, don't rely on this alone, read about the chakras in other contexts.

It's mostly a matter of being aware what your state is. To develop this awareness, it's a good idea to meditate. Meditation helps to balance the chakras and is particularly helpful when you have over active chakras.

how to use Perfect Potion's chakra blends

Massage is fundamental to the practice of aromatherapy. Select the most appropriate chakra blend and add approximately 5 drops to every 10mL of carrier oil. Patricia Davis recommends that you omit any deep strokes and concentrate on light effleurage and long sweeping strokes. Let your hands come to rest on any area of the body that feels as if it needs special healing. You should also pay particular attention to extremities: hands, feet and head, drawing off any negative energy present. Don't forget to give your hands a brisk shake each time you do so.

At the end of the massage include some strokes that do not touch the surface of the body – hold your hands just above your friend's body and move them slowly, sensing any areas that are cold, hot, blocked or troubled in any way.

Always finish with some long, sweeping strokes from below the feet to above the head, just above the body. End by holding your friend's feet for a minute or more, to ground their energy and allow a gentle return to the everyday reality.

You should create the appropriate ambiance for your bath. Choose a quiet time, light a candle, keep the lights dim and add three to five drops of the appropriate chakra blend to a tablespoon of dispersing bath oil, then add this to the batch ensuring it is mixed in well.

Enter the bath and lie still for 15 to 20 minutes. The time should not be spent for washing, if you need to clean, do this before you get into your bath.

Ritual baths can be used to “clear” after a bad experience, or to clear the aura after being in a crowded place, where you may be in proximity to energies you would not welcome into your space.

oil burners

To use a candle oil burner place a small quantity of water in the small dish on top of the oil burner, then add 5-10 drops of the most appropriate chakra blend essential oil. Light the candle and keep alight for approximately 15 to 30 minutes. Remember, never keep a burning object unattended and never allow the oil and water in the oil burner to dry out. To use the electric burners simply place 10 or more drops on the top of the vaporiser and plug in.

anointing

This means placing a drop of the chakra blend directly on the body. This is a very ancient practice, commonly used in many religions and spiritual traditions.

Usually the oils are applied to areas of the body that hold some symbolic significance, such as the head, the chest, hands or feet and to the areas that correspond to the chakras.

inhaling

Simply inhaling the chakra blend from the bottle is one of the most effective ways of changing our state of awareness. Sniffing the oil direct from the bottle can be overpowering, so you may just add a drop to a tissue or handkerchief.

Inhaling is the best way to assist meditation, visualisation and strengthening affirmations. Inhale the blend before the visualisation, meditation or affirmation and inhale deeply again at the end to anchor the experience.

crystals and gemstones

According to Patricia Davis crystals will enhance the action of the essential oils that you are using. The quartz crystals and gemstones can be used for the purpose of healing, energising and gaining access to higher dimensions of consciousness.

Davis says that crystals will enhance essential oils by amplifying the aroma. She says that just one drop of an essential oil on a crystal will perfume the entire room.

Coloured crystals and gemstones are attuned to a narrower range of vibrations that corresponds to their colour. They can be used to influence chakra energy and are selected according to their colour correspondence with the chakra. Clear quartz crystal can be used with any chakra blend and can resonate with any of the chakras.

You may simply carry the gemstone or crystal with you or the appropriate crystal can be placed around the chakra as a way of balancing the chakra.
